

Two halves. One tab.

Logo guidelines for the c and o that share one stroke.

A c and an o, woven together

The name is co + tab: together, and a tab. The mark is a c and an o that share one stroke, so the name and the idea are the same shape.

- The overlap is the shared amount. The lens where the rings cross is the part of the bill you split.
- The gap in the c is an open tab. It closes when the tab is settled. The loader and the settle animation use this.
- Over, then under. The c passes over the o at the bottom and under it at the top: two people, each holding up one end.
- The glass is the interface. The mark is made of the same frosted glass as the app.

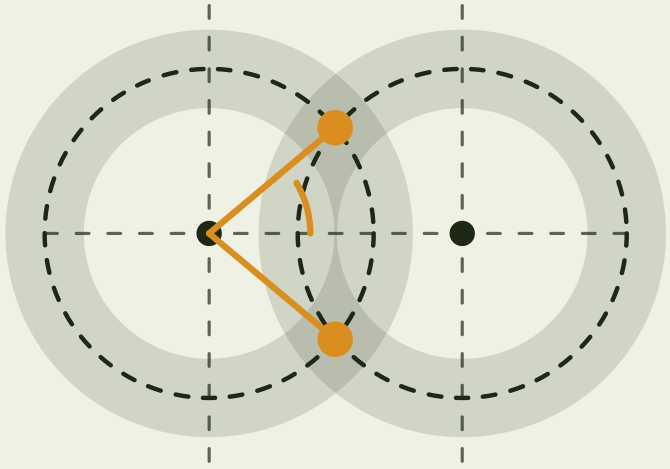

Built on circles

radius 13 · tube 6.2 · centres 20 apart

the mouth of the c is 80°

its tips land on the crossings

Two circles of radius 13, twenty units apart, drawn with a 6.2 tube on a 64-unit grid. The c is left open by 80°, so its two tips land exactly on the two crossings: one hides under the o, the other rides over it.

Never redraw the mark. Use the files in 01-svg.

Moss and mist are the two grounds. Sage is Tabby's fur and the glass tube. Amber is not in the mark: it is the app's one action colour, so keep it out of the logo.

Glass deep · on mist, cream and white

Flat · one colour, for print and small sizes

The mark with the name

Wordmark. cotab, lower case, in Outfit Bold with tracking –4%, drawn as outlines in every file. The mark is as tall as the word from the top of the b to the baseline, and shares its centre line.

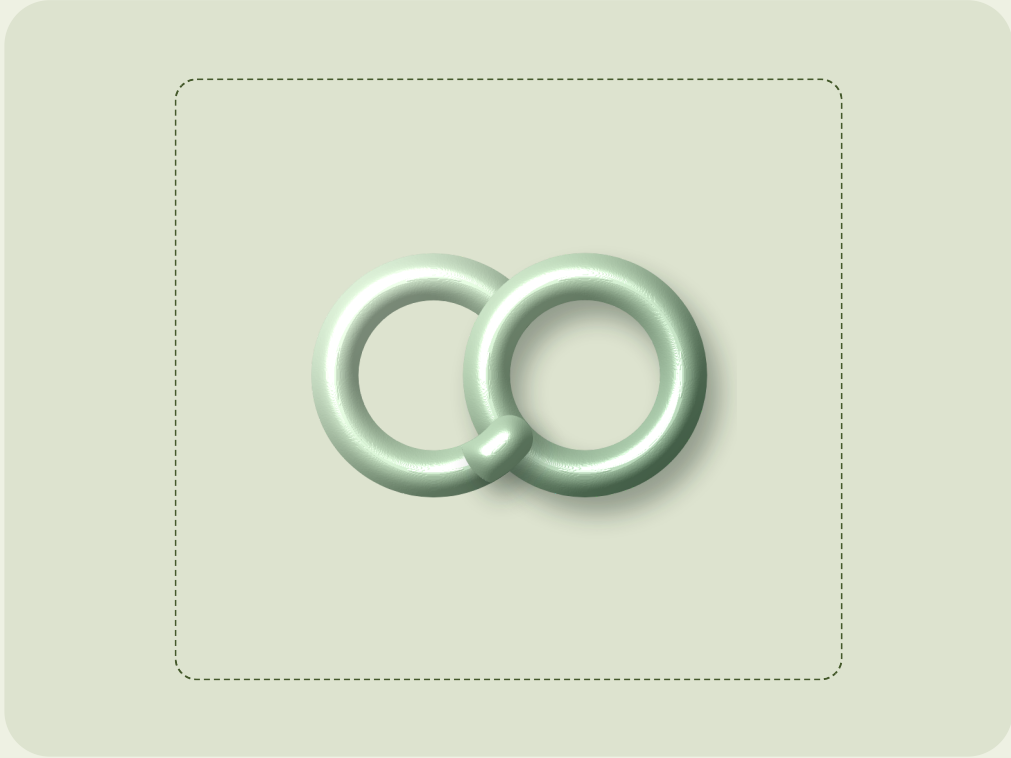

Stacked lockups are for square and tall spaces. Horizontal is the default.

Give it room

Clear space. Keep a margin equal to the height of one ring (the o) around the mark on every side. Nothing else enters it.

Minimum size. Glass: 48 px wide on screen, 16 mm in print. Below that, use the flat mark: 16 px on screen (favicons), 6 mm in print.

Favicons use the flat cream mark on moss, so they read on light and dark browser tabs.

Do and do not

Do

- Use glass on moss, ink, sage; use glass deep on mist and cream.
- Use flat one-colour files on photos and in print.
- Animate with the c closing, never with spinning.
- Keep clear space and minimum size.

Do not

- Recolour the glass tube, or add an outline or glow.
- Stretch, rotate, skew or mirror the mark.
- Put glass on a busy photo; use a flat file there.
- Close the c in the static logo: the open mouth is the brand. Closed is only for "settled".
- Re-set the word in another typeface.

The c closes when a tab is settled

- Loader · 2.4 s loop. The c closes over 0.6 s, holds, opens again. Gentle float and tilt.
- Intro · 3.4 s. The o draws in, then the c, then the c closes once and reopens to rest. With the wordmark it slides in at the end.
- Settle · 1.6 s. The c closes, a lime ripple leaves the crossing, hold closed.
- Idle · 4 s loop. Slow float, a 2° tilt.

Easing: ease in-out (cubic-bezier .4, 0, .2, 1). 30 frames per second. With reduced motion on, show the still logo.
